Leading Differently

28th June 2018

13:30–13.35 OPENING REMARKS

Phil James, CEO, The Institute of Leadership & Management

13.35–14.10 Leading with the brain with Carole Gaskell, CEO of Full Potential Group

Recent advances in our understanding of brain science are influencing the way coaches, managers and leaders work with colleagues to drive human performance. Carole Gaskell explores how these new insights are leading to powerful new strategies for improving personal and team performance.

14.10–14.40 In conversation with Simone Roche, Founder Northern Power Women

Kate Cooper, Head of Research, Policy & Standards, The Institute of Leadership & Management asks Simone Roche, entrepreneur and formidable force for change to share her insights and commentary on the new leadership paradigms she is helping to create.

14.40–15.05 REFRESHMENT BREAK

15.05–15.35 Patti Stevens: Supervising leaders

Leaders are more accountable than they have ever been, their actions more open to scrutiny and the environments in which they operate more complex. Patti Stevens outlines a different take on how leaders need to respond to the increasing complexity of their roles and that of the world in which they operate.

15.35–16.10 Joel Blake OBE: Harnessing inclusivity using entrepreneurial leadership

Joel Blake defines twelve steps entrepreneurial leaders can take to harness the latent potential found within everyone, enabling people to achieve great success regardless of any difference they may have.

16.10–16.45 Professor John Neal: Building mental toughness

The new leadership landscape requires an acceptance of change and an ability to keep on learning. John Neal highlights the important capabilities needed for this new terrain.
